

Did you ever wonder how much money Americans spend on Halloween?

An article by FOX TV Digital Team published October 27, 2022 (found on the internet) provided some answers!

According to the National Retail Federation's (NRF) annual survey by Prosper Insights & Analytics, 69% of consumers plan to participate in Halloween (2022), up from 65% in 2021 and close to the 68% in 2019. In all, Americans are expected to spend a whopping $10.6 billion on Halloween candy, costumes and decorations.

One in five people plan to put their pet in a costume, and 28% of people said they would attend a Halloween party. Nearly 70% of people said they would hand out candy to trick-or-treaters, and more than half would decorate their homes.

What do people spend the most on for Halloween?

Costumes make up the bulk of the money spent on celebrating Halloween, according to NRF. Spending on kids' and adult costumes was expected to total $2.9 billion, the most since 2017. Pet spending was expected to exceed the previous year's record high, reaching $710 million.

Easy peasy DIY tin-can lights!

Supplies: clean empty tin can, hammer and large nail or awl, paint, paint brush or sponge, sharpie, candle.

Fill tin can with water and freeze. Remove frozen can and draw design on can (keep it simple). You could outline a cat, bat, witch's hat, or words like Boo or Halloween. Place frozen can on a folded towel then use hammer and nail to puncture the design in the can. Thaw and drain frozen water. Once can is dry, paint. Cans make great luminaries as well! ## Halloween Pet Safety

Found at avma.org/resources-tools

How can we make Halloween safer for pets?

Costumes and masks, lights and decorations, and a constant parade of strangers coming to your door— Halloween can be a downright spooky experience for pets. You can protect your pets by taking these steps to reduce the risk of them being hurt, poisoned, or lost.

- Don't feed pets Halloween treats. Raisins can cause your pet's kidneys to fail, and candy may contain substances toxic to pets, such as chocolate or xylitol (a common sugar substitute found in sugar-free candies and gum). Often, you won't be able to tell what a treat or piece of candy contains just by looking at it.
- Make sure your pets have identification (microchip, collar, and ID tag) that will make it easy for someone to contact you and return them home in case they escape through an open door while you're distracted with trick-or-treaters.
- Keep lit candles, jack-o-lanterns, and other Halloween decorations out of reach of pets.
- Keep all human costume pieces away from pets, along with glow sticks, decorations, batteries, and other holiday items. When chewed, glow stick items can release liquid that tastes really bad and can make pets drool excessively or act strangely (though it isn't likely to be harmful). Other costume parts and decorations might cause choking, internal injury, or illness.
- If you plan to put a costume on your pet, make sure it follows these guidelines:
  - Fits properly and is comfortable
  - Doesn't have any pieces that easily can be chewed off or cause choking
  - Doesn't block your pet's sight, hearing, breathing, mouth, or movement
- Take time before Halloween to get your pet accustomed to the costume, and never leave a costumed pet unsupervised.
- If your pet is wary of strangers or has a tendency to bite, put them in a room away from the front door during trick-or-treating hours, or provide them with a safe hiding place.
- Keep your pet indoors.

Plan ahead to maximize Social Security benefits

Found in The Daily Record

Written by Liz Weston | NerdWallet

Social Security benefits were once tax-free. That changed in 1983, when Congress decided to tax a portion of benefits for the highest-income recipients.

Back then, fewer than 10% of beneficiaries were affected. Lawmakers failed to update the law to account for inflation, however, so today most Social Security beneficiaries have to pay federal income tax on at least some of their benefits, says Ted Sarenski, author of American Institute of CPA's "Guide to Social Security Planning."

There are a few ways to reduce that tax bite, however, especially if you can plan ahead.

How Social Security taxes work

Social Security taxes are based on your annual "combined income." Combined Income comprises:

- Your adjusted gross income, which includes your earnings, investment income, retirement plan withdrawals and other taxable income.
- Any nontaxable interest you receive, such as interest on municipal bonds.
- One half of your Social Security benefits.

For couples filing a joint return, a combined income between $32,000 and $44,000 means up to 50% of benefits may be taxable. For higher combined incomes, up to 85% of benefits may be taxable. Single filers may pay tax on up to 50% of benefits when combined income between $25,000 and $34,000, and up to 85% of benefits beyond that.

People who live solely on Social Security don't have to pay income taxes on their benefits, Sarenski notes. But even a relatively small amount of other income can cause benefits to become taxable.

Defuse the tax torpedo

The unique way Social Security benefits are taxed leads to something known as "tax torpedo" - a sharp rise in marginal tax rates followed by a decline, says William Reichenstein, professor emeritus at Baylor University and co-author of "Social Security Strategies: How to Optimize Retirement Benefits." Marginal tax rates are what you pay on each additional dollar of taxable income you receive.

Many middle-income households can face marginal tax rates that are 50% to 85% higher than their regular tax bracket because of this tax torpedo, Reichenstein says.

"You take another dollar out of your tax deferred account and it causes another 85 cents of Social Security to be taxed, so your taxable income goes up by $1.85," he says.

Moderate-income households may be able to defuse the effects by delaying the start of Social Security benefits as long as possible, Reichenstein says. Someone who waits until age 70 to start benefits, withdrawing money from retirement funds in the meantime, not only gets a larger Social Security check but could save hundreds or even thousands of dollars a year in taxes, Reichenstein says. If you're in the 10% to 22% federal tax brackets, consider talking to a tax pro or financial planner about how to mitigate the potential tax burden.

Contribute to a Roth

Having at least some money in a Roth IRA or Roth 401(k) can help reduce taxes on Social Security benefits. Withdrawals from these accounts are tax-free in retirement and aren't included in your combined income, Sarenski says.

You can't contribute to a retirement account if you don't have earned income, so people should diversify their retirement accounts long before they stop working, he says. Putting all your money in a pretax option could mean facing a whopping tax bill later.

"People should be trying to balance what they have in pretax income so they can balance their taxation in the future when they retire," Sarenski says.

Get charitable with your IRA

Once you're 70 1/2, you can make qualified charitable distributions, which are donations from your IRA to a charity. The withdrawal isn't taxable and won't count in your combined income as long as the money is transferred directly from the IRA custodian to the charity. You can transfer up to $100,000 this way.

If you reach an age at which required minimum distributions from retirement must begin—currently, that age is 73—qualified charitable distributions can count as your RMD, Sarenski says.

Consider other ways to reduce distributions

If you've been a good saver, RMDs can push you into a higher tax bracket as well as trigger higher Social Security taxes, Sarenski says.

Tapping your retirement funds before you're forced to do so could make sense, as could a Roth conversion, Sarenski says. With a conversion, money is transferred to a Roth IRA from a pretax retirement account such as an IRA or 401(k). Conversions typically incur taxes but withdrawals in retirement are tax-free.

Again, consider talking to a tax pro or financial planner first. Taking too much from retirement accounts can trigger unnecessary taxes, increase your Medicare or Affordable Care Act premiums and have other financial repercussions, such as running out of money prematurely. Avoiding these pitfalls takes careful planning, Sarenski says.

"The idea to me is to smooth out your tax rates," Sarenski says. "You don't want years where you're paying at 40% and years where you're paying zero."

LITTLE ROCK AIR FORCE BASE

www.thunderovertherock.com

THUNDERBIRDS SET TO HEADLINE 2023 THUNDER OVER THE ROCK AIR SHOW

LITTLE ROCK AIR FORCE BASE, Ark. Published by the 19th Airlift Wing Public Affairs Office

-- Save the date! Little Rock AFB welcomes back the U.S. Air Force's premier aerial demonstration, the Thunderbirds, for the Thunder Over The Rock Air Show, Oct. 21-22, 2023.

This will be the first time since 2018 that Little Rock AFB has opened its gates to the public for an air show. COVID-19 restrictions led to the cancellation of the previously planned Thunder Over the Rock Air Show, which was scheduled for October 2020.

"We are thrilled to announce that Thunder Over The Rock will return to Little Rock Air Force Base next year featuring the Thunderbirds," said Col. Angela Ochoa, 19th Airlift Wing and installation commander (2022). "While the air show serves to showcase how the Home of Herk Nation supports our nation's defense, it also serves as a 'thank you' to our outstanding communities for their continued support. Mark your calendars and come join us for the air show we have longed to bring you these last few years!"

The current Commander of the 19th Airlift Wing is Colonel Denny Davies.

The air show will be free and open to the public. The air show will also offer a variety of civilian and military performers, which will be announced at a later date. This event will be fun for all ages!

For more information call 501-987-6744.
